Robbie. Suddenly, he was interested. He was studying ancient languages at university and was excited by the idea of the mysterious writing. He decided to go the next day. Early in the morning, Robbie set off. After hiking up a mountain, he eventually found the entrance to the cave. As he approached, he saw a young woman there. ‘Hi. Have you been inside yet?’ he asked her. ‘Why are you here?’ she snapped. Robbie was shocked. ‘Err … umm … I just want to see the cave,’ he said. ‘Go away!’ she yelled at him. ‘This is my home and I have come back after many centuries,’ she continued. Some possible consequences of spending too much time on photo sharing apps are poor mental health, bullying, lack of sleep and depression. 2 The writer is not surprised that we see things online that are not true because we live in a world of fake news and distorted truths. 3 You can increase the number of likes you get by subscribing to a free service where you complete a social action in exchange for likes. 4 Influencers get paid in relation to how many followers they have, so may pay a fee in order to get more. 5 Having a lot of letters and numbers in your username suggests the account could be fake. 6 People use the ‘no filter’ hashtag because most images you see online are enhanced in some way. 7 The article gives the example of only showing a small section of a room, or a carefully selected part of a view to highlight that things are not always what they seem. 8 E xperts would like the number of followers and likes to be made private or deactivated, as well as a sign when an image has been airbrushed.
