

I'm human

We use cookies and similar tools to enhance your experience on Amazon video services, enable purchases, and provide our services as outlined in our Cookie Notice. We also use these cookies to understand customer behavior (e.g., measuring service visits) so we can improve our offerings. If you agree, we'll utilize cookies to complement your viewing experience across Amazon video services, as described in our Cookie Notice. Your choice applies to using first- and third-party advertising cookies on this service. Cookies store or access standard device information like a unique identifier. Up to 103 third parties use cookies on this service for purposes such as displaying personalized ads, generating audience insights, and developing products. To learn more about the personal information Amazon uses for advertising purposes (like Store order history, Prime Video Watch history, or demographic information) and cookies, see our Privacy Notice and Cookie Notice. You can Decline to reject or Customize to make more detailed advertising choices or learn how to change your preferences. Vienna, March 2, 1998 - Ten-year-old Natascha Kampusch disappears on her way to school after being kidnapped. She only escapes after 3096 days. In this documentary feature, Natascha talks about her 8 and a half years in captivity from the victim's perspective. The documentary describes Natascha's eight and a half years of captivity, with footage from inside the kidnapper's home, including the basement dungeon where Natascha was kept throughout her ordeal. The documentary starts with the day of her abduction. Natascha explains how she was kidnapped on the street by a man. Her mother, Brigitta Sirny, describes the morning of March 2nd, 1998, when she sent her daughter off to school. The police launched a large-scale search for the missing girl, which became the largest in Austrian law enforcement history. Natascha provides viewers with an in-depth look into her life during captivity. We learn how she was tortured and humiliated by her kidnapper. Despite this, Natascha says that she forgave Wolfgang Priklopil the moment she was abducted; otherwise, she wouldn't have been able to bear all those years of captivity. For Brigitta Sirny, the kidnapping meant eight and a half years of uncertainty about her daughter's fate - an ordeal of her own, which she describes in vivid detail. The kidnapper's best friend, Ernst Holzapfel outlines Wolfgang Priklopil's personality and tells the story of his encounter with Natascha Kampusch in July 2006 while she was still held captive. The documentary ends with Natascha's story of her escape. She describes August 23rd, 2006, and the time that followed, when rumors spread about child pornography networks and alleged accessories to the crime. Natascha Kampusch, a Viennese child who was kidnapped and held captive in a basement for eight years, is seeking to be seen as more than just the victim of a crime. She hopes that by sharing her story, she will be recognized as an ordinary human being deserving of respect. Amazon uses cookies to enhance customer experiences, facilitate purchases, and improve services. These cookies also help Amazon understand how customers use its services, which informs future improvements. A new documentary explores Kampusch's 8.5-year ordeal, featuring footage from the kidnapper's home, including the basement where she was kept. For the first time, her story is being shared in a detailed and personal way. The video is currently unavailable due to location restrictions. Kampusch discusses living under captivity after being kidnapped at age ten and shares her experiences of returning to the public eye at age 18.

Natascha kampusch nederlands. Natascha kampusch wolfgang priklopil. Natascha kampusch film trailer deutsch.